

How Do I Choose a Designer?

Interior Designers are trained to listen to and understand your aspirations and help you to design effective solutions to achieve your goals. As a client, selecting the right designer for your project is one of the most significant decisions you can make.

You can select an Interior Designer using a variety of methods:

Direct Selection

For residential or relatively small commercial projects you might select a designer based on a personal recommendation or seek out the name of one who has designed a similar project that you like.

Requests for Proposal

For large scale commercial projects a Request for Proposal (RFP) can be developed and distributed to a number of interior design firms for response.

Take time to interview several Interior Designers before making a final decision. When you meet with the designers, they will explain the design process, how they work and how they charge for their services. They will also interview you about your needs. It's important that both parties feel comfortable with the working relationship.
